I find this collection to be... Confident, playful and feminine. It has a timeless Hepburn-like quality without alienating those who lean toward masculine design. I'm at my creative best when... I am pushing the boundaries, and Kate Spade's new furniture line does just that, apparent in the bow tie back detailing—a distinct motif of the company reinterpreted for an instant-classic dining chair. I am attracted to the bold... Example of Kate Spade's ability to marry two of their most signature elements together: bows and polka-dots. The chairs embody... The brand's embrace on the interiors world, displaying both formality and playfulness alongside masculine and feminine notes. The sweep of the legs is very distinctive... And the black-and-white polka-dot pattern speaks to confidence and individuality.

Fashion, design, art and architecture... Are all variations on a creative theme. Some of the best furnishing collections are born from fashion icons, often causing a tidal wave of symbiotic brand revival. I absolutely love the Hooker-Rowley collaboration for that exact reason—an unexpected brand pairing that stops you in your tracks. The Fleur de Glee bench is... Unmistakably Rowley in pattern yet shows off the refined upholstery elements for which Hooker is known. Add in the modern lines and jewelry-like metalwork detailing and you're poised for perfection. As a fluent Francophile... I love the name and inherent playfulness associated with the bench. Whimsical upholstery meets modern metal—it's the juxtaposition that makes us stop and ponder. Interiors should not exist on a single axis... But reflect the many moods and facets of personalities. Without creativity... Design becomes predictable and expected. Here, I'm so attracted to the hard, modern silhouette coupled with the floral, feminine pattern.
